Curriculum consultant Chantia Nelson reviews lesson plans.

Seniors Brian Evans and Becky Pantlick struggle to win the race in the pep rally.

Cowab Todd Nix eggs up the mike while trying to get the message across to the players and fans — "Beat G.P."

Before the Morning Bell

Buzz!!! Rise and shine. Up to another exciting day of higher education. For some students the alarm clock is their best friend or their worst enemy. It's rush, rush, rush!

Everyone's daily routine differs. Guys, as well as girls become possessive in the bathroom in the morning. Some people prefer to shower, some don't, some eat, while others spend more time with the mirror.

"It takes forever to dry my hair in the morning," said Sophomore Andrea Greco.

When night soaps are too exciting for a section review, and Algebra homework doesn't compare to MTV, the morning is a good time to catch up on homework.

"I sometimes wake up early and do my homework at four in the morning," said Senior Allicia Holland.

"When I do not have time to do my homework at night, I do it a little before the bell," said Senior Hope Esparza.

Competing with the clock can sometimes get people in a frenzy. "It's a challenge!" said Senior Lea Anne Gilbert.

Getting motivated in the morning can be hard for some people. For Junior Greg Parker, it's jamming out in an early morning guitar lick.

A good morning breakfast is supposed to be the answer to a healthy body and a stronger brain.

"I do not have the time to eat in the morning, but during fourth I regret not eating," said Senior Jeannie Galvan.

Morning people or not, we are all heading for the same thing — school! Datz & Kat

"When I don't have time to read at night, a few minutes can do wonders," said Senior Hope Esparza.

"I like to hang out in the Senior locker area before school to talk to my friends and see what they've done over the weekend," said Senior Monica Hinojosa.

In a rush! Freshmen Liane McGill and Frank Morin attempt to get to class on time.

"Going to school at 8:30 gives me more time to get ready in the morning," said Sophomore Andrea Greco.

"Most of the time students do not eat breakfast and just grab some type of snack or junk food," said cafeteria/snackbar worker Terry Pendergraph.

Early morning gossip is a must for Freshmen Leslie Molina, Inez Cantu, and Valerie Balderns

"Just getting up is hard enough," said Freshman Leslie Aman.

Is that some early morning cramming we see coming from honor student Angie Moore.

Learning by osmosis. The library is a great place to get a little work done while still trying to wake up.

Just Hangin' Out

It's time to jam! The weekend is here, so prepare to get wild. Students need a break after a whole week of agony. The weekend begins on Friday at 3:30 p.m. and does not officially end until midnight Sunday.

Almost every teenager goes "cruisin'" with their friends. Countless miles are put on Dad's car. Cruising from Burger King to the courthouse was a social ritual that many took part in. Every weekend there is always an attempt to conjure up a party. "I just like to hang out with everyone and go to a party if there is one," said Senior Allen Pearson.

Teens like a change whether it's bowling or going to the best (and only) movie theater in town.

The Chess Club and the Texas Grand are favorites on Thursdays. Many teens dress up in their kickier outfits or stylish club clothes. Fiesta Marina and Cestahowa always have something to offer, while others trek to The Wave in Corpus.

"If you go too often it gets monotonous," said Senior Janine Fredey about the Texas Grand.

The phone is also an escape. "I like to use my extra time talking on the phone," said Freshman Erin Carter.

For the adventurous at heart one must search in the most minute and abstract of places. In other words — good luck in finding something to do!

There never seems to be enough library time. Senior Bryce Carrillo Eating at fine restaurants such as McDonald's make Spencer, John, and Daniel wish they would have worn jackets with their ties.

The library can really come in handy when you have spare time on your hands. Sophomore James Robinson checks out the latest paper.

I could sure use a Pepsi! Sophomore Sylvia Cantu is caught in the act.

"Mmm . . . I love lunch!" said Sophomore Patricia Saenz.

Less than 20% of our school participated in voting for the Homecoming Court.

"Getting my hair done is quite a task," said Freshman TeNeil Moore. In this picture with Saragosa, Moore was getting ready for Annual Ent.

"When I'm not studying for Dr. McTee, I like to cruise around in my new IROC and see what's going on," Senior Ronnie Young said.

Is It Vogue?

It's toga time. "It's really a prop for theater arts, but it was dramatic for a moment," said Freshman Sandy Gutierrez.

Walk with confidence. "Since I work half the day I dress for comfort and success," said Senior Tami Benavidez.

Blue blue jeans. How long are these stone wash and ragged out jeans going to last?

No hat's allowed on campus? Maybe someone forgot to tell TEAMS teacher Pat Hennig.

Stripes, neons, blacks; tight, short, baggy; pick your poison. High tech and high fashion is something girls and guys alike try to achieve in our conservative town.

This year we are seeing retrospective clothes become popular. The once snubbed bell-bottom and tie-dyed clothes are now being worn by some brave individuals.

"I dress for myself, but it's hard to be your own person without getting strange looks from others," said Junior Lyz Latson.

Some clothes fade away in the fashion zone, while others stay hip for years. "I've always been most comfortable in Wranglers," said Senior Lisa Rothlisberger.

"The white t-shirt is dominant in my closet," said Junior Rubin Gonzales.

Having a good eye for putting the right pieces together is a helpful talent to possess.

"I like clothes that are comfortable but eye-catching," said Senior Melissa Zambrano.

"My black Reeboks can go with just about anything, comfort counts and that's important to me," said Senior Roland Salazar.

"When I go shopping, I try to keep an open mind. Clothes that look strange on a hanger are sometimes given a whole new perspective on you," said Junior Cori Longoria.

Accessories can really make a difference with some attire. "Big earrings, hair bands, and colorful watches are always a must," said Senior Tina Laredo.

For the latest styles one must search beyond the Beeville city limits. "I usually wind up at Chess King," said Freshman Ramsey Gamez. "The clothes are expensive, but that's the price you have to pay to look good."

Although school code doesn't permit shorts and hats, some flared shorts have been spotted and an occasional hat peps up every so often.

Clothes definitely make the difference, but how you use them can literally make you or break you. K. Hanshaw

Floral prints and broaches are some new fashion statements being made by such students such as Senior Tanya Hurst.

"Being in a small town fashion changes don't occur too often," said Senior Stacy Mixon.

"There's only two climates to dress for — winter and summer — that can cause fashion problems," said Junior Jason Hardin.

Let's get comfy! Senior Elda Gonzales shows off some poolside finesse.

"I do not leave home without my shades," said Senior Matt Bryant. "It's an essential element!"

You Say He's Just a Friend

Together forever? Although some may consider high school relationships unimportant and menial, others may find that the person they spend the majority of their time with is their true mate.

"We've been going out close to two years, and at this point we've decided that we are meant for each other," said Senior David Rodriguez about his girlfriend Jennifer Salinas.

"My guy has two roles to play: best friend and boyfriend," said Sophomore Anna Castillo.

"I have grown so close to him that I cannot imagine my life without him," said Senior Lea Anne Gilbert.

Dependence upon one another can sometimes be overwhelming. "It seems that he can almost read my mind," said Freshman Jennifer Sanchez.

Being faithful and avoiding the 'wandering eye' can sometimes test a relationship to its fullest.

"Michelle (Bridge) and I have been going out since our Sophomore year. It's been a bumpy ride, but all in all, we love each other," said Senior David Estrada.

The old story of high school sweethearts staying together after graduation may come true for some of these couples. For others, it may evoke a new challenge to see what else is out there. Whatever the outcome, that special person will not be forgotten.

Luv songs of 1990: "Will You Be My Girl" — Stevie B.; "Nothing Compares to You" — Sinead O'Connor; "Right Here Waiting" — Richard Marx; "I'll Be Your Everything" — Tommy Page; "Forever" — KISS.

"We were friends for a long time then it just happened nice and by. Now being with him is very normal," said Senior Darla Sullivan.

"It's been the best time of my life a wonderful experience," said J. Tigue Cottle about girlfriend C. Wilson.

"We've been together since my freshman year from Houston, and she helped me adjust," said Louis Enrique seen with Misty Burlingame.

"I always enjoy being with him," said Junior Heather Donovan here with 6 month companion Lynn.

"He's always been there for me as a friend," said Junior Leri Fernandez.

"Larry's given me a lot of reasons to make me happy and mad but that little feeling is still there," said Senior Shelly Garcia.

"Going to a dance with someone should make you feel comfortable. I would rather talk my cousin," said Freshman Cynthia Barbosa.

"Joe and I have been together for two years, and I wouldn't change a thing. He's my best friend and boyfriend," said Senior Jeannie Galvan.

"Flipped over 400 David and Jennifer have been flying high on Cloud 9 for the past 2 years."

Caught Red-Handed

What the cat dragged in Senior Eric Valdez waits outside after a run-in with Dr. McTee.

Having one of those days . . . Sophomore Lea Anne Massengale drops her books on way to tutorials.

Hunger pains Senior Lupe Vidaure serves lunch detention after missing tutorials.

Being in the dog house can be 'Ruff.' Restrictions can vary to a simple one hour detention, up to three weeks of torture. Teachers and parents are similar, they just do not give up!

Not showing up to detention can cause a quick trip to Mr. Cantu's dreaded office. Suspension notices were written like crazy.

"When I do not show up to my tutorials, I get in trouble by getting suspended," said

Senior Chris Gomez.

It seems the only way you're punished, the town is out partying there you are reading a

"When I get grounded I feel the whole world is there but me," said F man Renee Paishon. As for the teachers point of view, the saying is "Stay Of Trouble."

A moment of silence Jacob Aguirre is sent out of Coach Monroe's classroom for laughing out loud.

Laughter is the best medicine (below) Senior Michelle Freeman is sent out of Mrs. Duffy's room for a giggling.

The excitement is building Naughty, naughty, naughty. The lunch-detention club has their daily meeting.

How long is this class? Senior Michael Robinson says he's going to the library. But instead, reads a hairdo mag.

FESTIVITIES IN THE FALL

The Diez y Seis de Septiembre is becoming one of South Texas' Largest celebrations. It all started back in 1924 when the first queen was crowned. Since then, it has grown to a city tradition.

"We planned to make Fiesta '89 the biggest and best one," said John Ybanez, chairman of the Fiesta Committee. This year's festival seemed to draw the largest crowd with an estimated arrival of 36,000 people.

David Marez and the People Band drew in hundreds of people under the small pavillion for a live concert and dance.

"It was so crowded, that I could hardly walk, much less dance, but the music was great and all the people there made it interesting," said Senior Lisa Cano.

"The food booths were great, there was quite a variety for any kind of taste," said Sophomore Richard Sanchez. Many students such as Seniors Hector Longoria, Leti Gonzales and Geri Del Bosque donated their time to work in them.

Angela Mancuso worked at her mother's snow-cone and cotton candy stand. "I really didn't mind spending my time down there because I saw all my friends and heard all the music, we'll probably do it again next year," Mancuso said. Chris Garcia

Junior Kris Garcia dances to a native song of Mexico at the festival. Garcia has been dancing in the pageant since her freshman year.

Senior Hector Longoria takes the heat behind the barbeque pit. Many students helped out in booths for their different organizations.

Events during the festival were both colorful and mysterious.

Senior Chris Gomez drips after spending the day in the dunking booth for his team.

Why do you attend Diez y Seis Western Week?

"I like to see the different variety events and food due to the fact new changes in our society."
Jeannie Galvan, 12

"I like to be with my girlfriends she's not with me, it's nice to be with pretty girls."
Roger Cano, 11

"I go for the food, the arts and to meet new people, there's something there for everyone."
Monica Hinojosa, 12

"Western Week is a regular which my family and I always go to. Since I'm in band, I have always been in the parade."
Brenda Downes, 11

"It plays a great part in the development of my culture. It is a great experience for any race to go to these unique festivals!"
Irma Lee, 11

"I went to Western Week to go to the pageant and be with my friends."
Cecilia Cavazos, 12

The drum roll began, the tension on the stage built and finally the Western Week festival was kicked off with Shannon Campbell crowned queen.

"I met a lot of new people and it was a great learning experience. This is a moment I will never forget as long as I live," said Campbell.

Many other girls were out there representing our school. Roxanne Salazar placed first runner up, and Jana Jaure placed second runner up.

"Running for Miss Western Week was a lot of fun and lots of friends were made," said Sophomore Jaure.

"This year there was a lot of students as well as adults which makes a perfect combination for having some fun," said Senior Lea Anne Gilbert.

Although some students were enjoying themselves, others worked behind the hot grill. "I worked at my dad's booth, and sometimes I'd see everyone walking around and having a great time. I just wanted to join in," said Senior Pat Martinez.

Numerous events and presentations were given by our student body. "By showing off some of our talents, I felt, it filled our school with pride," said Senior Angie Martinez. By Daisy Loya

A NIGHT OF ROYALTY

Homecoming 1989-90, was a successful event. The elaborate gala had its traditional mums, dance, and of course the Homecoming Court.

Mums this year were very fashionable for the girls, but expensive for the guys. Homecoming spirit was painted throughout the town. Cars and downtown stores were orange and white for the entire week. Cheerleaders did most of the painting and cleaning.

Tension grew as all the Duchesses were announced for the different courts, when finally the only two girls left standing were Seniors Shannon Finke and Jennifer Ramirez. Finke garnered the most votes to win the crown.

"I was so excited and I felt really privileged to have this honor," said Finke.

Homecoming was not also a night of royalty but also an exciting win for the football team. Rockport was soundly defeated by a score of 23-6 with a record spectator crowd. Tika Bertsch

Wild And Crazy Times

Senior Joe Henry Herrera has the privilege of signing the spirit stick held by head cheerleader Shannon Finke.

Former alumni Stacy Rendon awards Coach Powell and varsity football members a spirit award.

We've got spirit, yes we do, we've got spirit, how about you? Sophomores won most every battle cry yell at pep rallies this year.

Hold it steady! Varsity cheerleaders supported each other in more ways than one at pep rallies. There has been a few falls this year, but no serious injuries.

Pom-poms shake, megaphones boom, and the band rattles! As an anxious bell rings, students begin to file out for the start of the pep rally.

When all the players are lined up, separate battle cries roar. Each grade cheers and yells when the cheerleaders are finished. The idea of pep rallies is to get everyone excited for the upcoming game, especially the football players.

Getting excited is important. "It's hard not to get fired up when everyone around you is yelling and screaming," varsity player John Santana.

This year most rallies were held outside due to the new gym, that did not keep students from having good time. Tika Bert

An Egyptian chick-aboomb! Varsity cheerleaders Shannon Finke, Roxanne Ramirez, and Roxanne Salazar try a new cheer.

All for the Trojans stand up and holler! J.V. cheerleader Cheryl Wilson peps up the crowd.

Hit it! The Freshmen squad members TeNeil Moore and Leslie Tindol show off their jumping talents.

V-I-C-T-O-R-Y, that's the sophomore battle cry!

Annual Staff Takes Control

Where's Collin? We tried, but he was booked. We were able to get Tracy, Sandy, Angela, Shannon, and April to participate in a mock version of Remote Control.

Intense! New Frontier! Exciting! MTV — via Beeville style. Although our staff was not able to book 'Downtown Julie Brown', the show added something special to a regular Friday night.

"What made the show far-out was the students participating, they really were talented," said Junior Chris Rangel.

A different type of Remote Control put on by the Annual Staff opened the show. Jazz band, Poor Boy Players, Baladiers, and soloist Lyz Lat-son and Kerri McKay were features in the show also.

"Overall I enjoyed the show, but it could have been better with more involvement from the student body," said Senior Steven Scotten.

"It was a lot more organized than last year's and not too long either," said Junior Craig Jefferson.

Power 93 provided the music following the show. General opinions of the dance were mixed.

Freshman Sandy Gutierrez

said, "I like the whole set at the dance and even music."

Decorations were done early Saturday morning, was positively a group effort just about everyone did their part to make it a success said Senior Daisy Ann Lee.

"Although we had a rough start, I was really pleased with the outcome," said Junior Chelsea Taylor, "Being MC was quite an experience."

Much effort was put into the show and dance.

No stage fright here! The pride of our Senior class stood tall as their various awards were presented.

They're in control. Sandy Curtis, Angela Mancuso, and Robert Gamez started the show off with a mock version of Remote Control.

"I was really surprised at getting the Who's Who honor," said Jennifer Ramirez. "I had a lot of fun."

Smile Mr. Cantu. Swinging music, mannequins, and spray paint awaited students as they filed in.

Each honoree was called on stage individually by MC's Chelsea Taylor and Daisy Loya.

ROLL OUT THE TEAL CARPETS

The new generation kicked off the prom with a success. Silver Reflections being the theme was cool and ironic. It gave everyone a chance to check out themselves in the mirror as they entered the world.

"I loved the theme and the decorations. My favorite part was the mirrors. I got to check out my hair every now and then," said Junior Gloria Segovia.

Flashing cameras and video recorders rolled on all night. "My eyes hurt from all the flashes," said Junior Marible Gonzales.

"I thought the decorations were great and I enjoyed every part of it," said Senior Rob Wingenter.

Pictures are good evidence for the most memorable moments of this royal evening. "The thing I'll remember the most is when the white limo drove up to my house and then noticing how fine the chauffeur was," Senior Irene Segovia.

Every girl's worst fear is showing up in the same dress which someone else has on. "I think some one had a dress similar to mine, so I kept a good distance," said Senior Donna Ausbrooks.

Many girls start planning prom months ahead. On the other hand guys can get prepared a shorter time. "I got dressed about 30 minutes," said Senior Roland Salazar.

Renting tuxes, worrying about corsages, girls fretting about hairdos, makeovers, and unicorn dresses are all elements which make this such a beautiful special occasion. Daisy Loya.

Taking a break. Rob figures out which lovely lady should be his next dance partner.

Showing some shoulder. Senior Yolanda Salazar and her date were sure to bring a camera to capture some moments.

Did you see her dress? We're not sure what Seniors Tami Benavidez and Raquel Salazar are discussing, but we have an idea.

Dressed to kill? Mike Luce looks like he needs to get 'fired up' and bust some moves on the dance floor.

Serving the seniors and juniors. Sophomore Anna Gonzalez serves Senior Rene Guerrero the best she can.

Don't have too much fun. Seniors Angie Hoverson and Melissa Rousse wait patiently for the king and queen to be announced.

WE MAY NEVER PASS THIS WAY AGAIN

Some seniors might call it the end. Still, others might call it the beginning. Whatever you call it, a new chapter was written when 237 seniors walked across the stage and earned their diploma June 2. "I couldn't believe that it (graduation) was here already. It seems like the first day of school was only yesterday," said senior Monica Hinojosa.

The ceremony was held at Bee County College under blistering 95 degree heat. "The thirty minutes before 8:00 were the longest thirty minutes of my life," said senior Eric Valdez.

Although a ceremony involving this many students may have seemed like a long time, for the graduates they passed by quickly. "I feel it went by too fast. By the time I knew it, I had my diploma in my hand," said senior Roland Salazar.

Speeches were given by valedictorian Scott Gray, salutatorian Joshua Palmatier and others. Veronica Jordao, the foreign exchange student, said in her speech that "I will surely miss all my friends. I will not forget the special Mexican food."

"The most sentimental thing was the throwing of caps and changing the seal," said Rene Guerra.

Hats off to the orange and white Seniors Chris Hosinski and Doug Fink figure out how to put on the mortarboard.

Taking a giant step Seniors Joshua Palmatier, Dawn Bomersbach, and Amy Robinson lead the entourage.

It's hard to say good-bye Veronica Jordao says her final farewells to South Texas and the rockin' class of '90.

Enjoy the ride Seniors Hope Esparza and Brian Evans sit back and remember the long 12 year road.

Check This Out . . .

You say Birthday? Senior Becky Pawlik had a special present waiting for her with the help of a few friends.

"Computer Math turns 'stressful' when you run the program through and get a Syntax Error five times," said Senior Jennifer Fairchild.

"The library is a great place to go and hangout" said Junior Richard Zowie. "Most of the time I just do my homework."

"The most we do in my Algebra II class is take notes," said Junior Angela Gonzales.

"I'm not sure how studying old English in Mrs. Griffin's is going to help me in life," said Senior David Rodriguez.

"I had to take a phone break," said Senior Linda Flores.

Valentine's Day proved to be a happy one for many who received balloons and flowers but a worrisome day for the attendance office.

"Being a busy person, I like to relax by laying on the couch and soaking in some tv," said Junior Chelsea Taylor.

"The library is my primary source for cranking out love letters to my girlfriend," said Senior Troy Turner.

"Concentrating in class can be hard when there is a lot of noise all around you," said Senior Maribel Cuellar.

"I had a lot of fun in district choir and region contest, it gave me a chance to prove my skills," said Freshman Dana Johnson.

"Being creative can drive you crazy sometimes," said Senior Loly Garza.

VARSIY FOOTBALL

"This is during a crossover strip drill against Calallen. It's to warm up lower sections of my muscles. This gets the team ready for a tough game set ahead of us," said Senior Armando Gonzales.

"At the beginning of the year, there was no effort shown from the players. At midseason, things changed for the better. I really hated to see the year end," said Head Coach Houston Powell.

YEAR OF ACHIEVEMENT

The season began on an average August day. This was the first day of practice where the players received equipment and uniforms: seniors worried about being cut, juniors worried about making the team.

"Two-a-days are practices — once in the morning and once in the afternoon. The practices are hot, but it's worth it," said Senior Eric Valdez. "These practices are where you begin to learn the fundamentals of football."

The team opened up the season against a large CC King team. Their defense was great, but it had something about it. On the other hand, the offense had a great night. Senior Hector Longoria had 106 yards rushing and Onie Lopez had 117 yards.

"The pep rally has a big effect on the players, because when you come out, and you hear the band playing, it gets you fired up," said Senior Chris Gomez.

Scotten, D. Ford, J. Martinez, R. Scott, E. Valdez, J. Villareal, J. Tindol.

After an injury during summer work outs, Junior Brenda Downs wraps Junior Onie Lopez's ankle to kill the pain. Getting hurt at practice is one of the risks a player takes when going out for any contact sport.

In disbelief, Senior Roland Salazar expresses his dismay while looking at the scoreboard during a game against Flour Bluff: "We put our offense into action but it was like running into a brick wall."

Just do it. Senior quarterback Reagan Scott pushes through the defense to score another touchdown against Tuloso-Midway.

An All Out Effort

Offensive returners were Seniors Reagan Scott QB, Senior Michael Todd WB, Senior Ricardo Jimenez WB, Senior Joel Martinez OT, Junior Jaime Martinez OT; Senior Chris Hosinski G, and Jason Tindol at center. The only returning starters on defense this year were: Seniors Jason Tindol DE, Eric Valdez DT, Armando Gonzales DT.

One of the most exciting games occurred against our biggest rival — Gregory-Portland. The Trojans, after taking the field, scored two back-to-back touchdowns within the first quarter. What seemed to be an easy victory soon turned into heartbreak.

The Wildcats came from behind to win 28-21.

"This season, the team played one of the hardest districts in South Texas with powerhouses such as G-P, Calallen, and Robstown. Although they had a rough year, they accomplished many goals that will hopefully pave the road for next year's team," said Senior Roland Salazar.

Calallen won the district title but was defeated in the first round of playoffs. G-P was runner up and went on to the state playoffs.

J Varsity Football

Football is probably one of the most favored sports here. This year's J.V. team fared well against their competitors. They faced a tough season but pulled through with shining colors.

Working out in the heat of the day has not hampered the many accomplishments for the team. The effort to succeed and pull together was always met.

"Practicing, working and fighting hard in the heat of the day describes the J.V. football team this year," said sophomore Ell Varga.

"Having a good workout is when we go out there and get our minds on our own business and hopefully become successful," said sophomore Jim Hitchcock.

Keeping a team alive after countless hours of practice is an everyday process that the team has to take on both physically and mentally. "The weakness is not just playing but preparing mentally for practice," said Coach Steve Evans.

The extra help. Sophomore Danny Guerrero punts the ball in an attempt to score the extra point.

Never giving up. Sophomore Ruben Contreras runs for a touchdown weeks before his serious injury.

Long hot summers. In order to improve skill and build strength, players must perform routine warm-ups.

Although the JV team record might seem unimpressive, they finished 4-6. It has been a learning experience for some.

In the games that the team lost, they were never badly beaten. They managed to shut out two teams in the district to earn a respectable final standing.

The quarterbacks are the ones that "call the shots." In every team they make the play, the run, and they throw the passes that are able to make touchdowns.

"Quarterback Roland Zepeda helps me out on the field but the job couldn't be done without the front line," said sophomore Michael Gonzales.

"Without the players and fans' support, the JV football team would not exist today," said Coach Steve Evans.

TOP After Rueben Contreras' accident, the school and community rallied behind him holding fundraisers and offering financial support.

Freshman Football FRESHMEN FOOTBALL

Freshman football is a time unlike any other high school athletic sport. It is the passage of junior high kids into A.C. Jones young men. They are given the chance to play in the scholastic big league.

"We had a lot of problems in moving the ball against our opponents," said Freshman Russell Martinez. "Where we were fast, they were faster. Where we were big, they were bigger."

Despite the dismal 1-9-1 record, the fish never lost the determination to be the best to beat the best. Too many mistakes attributed to nerves lead to the downfall of close-at-hand defeats.

"It's tough being on the freshman team. We're adjusting to the change in schools, the long practices, travelling on Thursdays, and still finding time to do homework and study," said Freshmen Kelly Metz.

"Most margins of defeat were minimal. We would lead the game up until the last quarters then blow it. Coach Luce and Coach Beasley would never give up on us, though. They would go over our mistakes and tell us how to correct them for the next game," said Freshman Peter Guevara. "But I'd rather play varsity."

Some people think that cheerleading is just a wimpy sport for "dingy" girls. "I feel I do so much more than anyone ever sees. It's really a lot of unrewarded work," said Senior Roxanne Salazar. "The feeling of cheering for your team makes the few thanks you get all worth it."

Being out in the spotlight can make some girls embarrassed or shy. "Cheerleading has not changed my personality," said Junior Angela Olivarez. "I have always felt that I've been on the crazy side."

A positive and outgoing personality is an important factor. Senior Shannon Finke said, "I'm willing to do just about anything to help a fellow cheerleader. I wouldn't trade this for anything and it's brought me a lot closer to a lot of people I may have never met."

Cheerleaders play a big role out in the real world, too. Finke plans to attend UCLA and become a cheerleading instructor.

"There is no better feeling than standing on the sideline, looking up in the stands, and cheering for your team. Sometimes I can't believe I'm actually there," said Senior Jeff Ramirez.

Sponsor Sandra Elizalde has great expectations for the squad. "They are going to do well at competitions, in a short amount of time they've had to practice they have showed a lot of effort."

The seniors this year were very sad about leaving. "I was scared of tryouts, I'm going to miss all of you after I graduate," said Senior Melissa Zambrano. TeNell Moore

You never quite know what to expect with cheerleading. I remember during the Homecoming game there were a dozen Naval pilots in the stands. They literally took over our job by starting a wave and making up their own cheers! They really were hilarious when they whistled at us.

Slow down Shannon. So maybe walking like an Egyptian didn't go across with everybody, but trying something different never hurts.

Rock'n it steady. Getting the players, the band, drill team, and of course the fans hyped up at games is always an important factor.

People ask us sometimes how we come to trust each other when we have to be caught from a pyramid or something from way up high. I tell them 'If you spent every waking hour of the day with these same girls as I do, you really have no other choice!'
Jennifer Ramirez

JV & Freshman Cheerleading FRESHMAN CHEERLEADING

Cheerleading is like any other sport. It takes a lot of work and determination.

"It's not all fun and games," said sophomore Lori Butcher. "At times it is hard to agree with other squad members, but there must always be compromises."

"Smiling is very important," said sophomore Marivell Saucedo. "I don't care how bad we're losing or how cold it is, you have got to smile!"

If you want to be in the spotlight, you have got to be willing to give up your time. "I don't always have time for a social life and then to top it off there is always the threat of keeping up my grades," said freshman Heather Huchens.

Being a cheerleader is demanding and some new members have mixed feelings about their responsibilities. "Everyone thinks you're an airhead and sometimes the squad argues. I'm sure I'll try out next year, but I would really like to get more into sports," said freshman Erin Carter.

Just like the football team, the cheerleaders have one main goal, to win the CHEERS competition in San Antonio.

Freshman TeNeil Moore put it best by saying, "Co-operation is spelled with two letters — we." TeNeil Moore.

Every cheerleader must go to cheerleading camp during the summer to perfect their jumps and cheers.

Sophomores had spirit this year, thanks to their outgoing cheerleaders.

VARSITY VOLLEYBALL

Are you ready? Junior Kayce Goynes stays on her toes during the whole game. Goynes also played varsity her sophomore year.

Putting the full effort. Junior Lisa Belew has just finished hitting one powerful shot.

Years of dedication. Leti Gonzales has been a team member since her freshman year.

Despite the many losses of the varsity volleyball team, they have pulled together and learned to share hard work and dedication.

The team consisted of only ten players who usually practiced two hours each day. Since most varsity sports require much practice, leisure time is not something the team is familiar with.

Although defeat may be hard for some teams to handle Senior Leti Gonzales has some comforting advice. "We learned from our mistakes. It pushes us to work harder despite the teams we have played."

Having high goals and expectations is something every organization must possess. "Spirit is very important at our games," said Senior Kelly Trevino.

The team has no regrets about joining volleyball. "There were definitely no attitudes that needed adjusting," said Senior Cecilia Cavazos.

Volleyball is a challenge to the player. At some point you have to keep your game up while at the same time you have to keep up your grades.

"The purpose of being in high school sports is to do the best that you can," said Coach Carol Dakan. Kathy Hanshaw with Krissy Manuszak.

JV & Freshman Volleyball FRESHMAN VOLLEYBALL

This year has been one of bad luck for the JV and Freshman teams despite their many efforts.

"I have faith in my girls in spite of their slump," said Coach Carol Dakan.

At two every afternoon you could find the JV team members hard at work. The team begins work on a drill called 'bumping'. This involves using the forearms to bump the ball around. The next drill is called 'set and spike'. This helps coordinate your leg muscles and jumps.

"Learning each player's styles is very essential," said sophomore Tanya Morgan.

"I believe we had confidence in each other through the whole season," said sophomore Josie Vidaure.

Although this year had its ups and downs, we look forward to prospering next year. Krissy Manuszak.

Support on the sidelines. "It feels good to know that someone is watching you play," said Sophomore Christine Wood.

VARSITY & JV TENNIS

Unlike other sports, tennis is year-round. Only Seaforders are exempt from off-season in the spring.

"When I concentrate on mistakes, I'm not playing my best. I should think about the next point," said Senior Rick Landman.

There's always time to take a gossip break — especially when it's not as long as Chuck Lima doesn't find out.

"You can really learn a lot from watching other people play," said Junior Irma Lee with Jennifer Jackson.

Every year a different feeling represents our tennis team. This year was the one that the girls showed up the guys. In past seasons, the male ego's jumped high, while the girls played at second.

"I think having more girls on the team helped because other schools tended to have weaker female players," said Senior Rick Lundeen.

"I believe it has hindered the team because of the few boys we do have, there is a lack of experience," said Senior Darla Dallas.

Junior Katherine Graham looks at the uneven ratio as an advantage. "Coach Luna has been able to help the guys more and spend more time with them."

Over the past few years, tennis has gotten more recognition thanks to national media and outgoing players. This once preppy sport is now interesting to different people. School and parental support is becoming more noticeable also.

"I'm going to miss playing after I graduate," said Senior Cindy Diekey, "But I plan to keep playing when I can."

"Having my mom and dad watch me makes me strive harder to win," said Senior Laurie Harvey, "Even if I didn't do good, they were still proud of me."

"The highpoint of my playing was when Clay (Martin) and I beat Rockport-Fulton. We came back and won by a point," said Lundeen.

"After being with the team for four years, I can see how I've improved as a player and as a person," said Senior Dawn Bombersbach.

With eight Seniors leaving this year, the future of the team depends on people like Tika Bertsch. "Everyone on the team has a positive attitude," said Bertsch.

Having Coach Dakan work with the JV was a considerable amount of help according to the players. "She tells us what we need to improve on," said Freshman D'Ann Taylor.

As with other teams at school, the tennis team is no exception to transportation problems. "We were going to Robstown for a tournament and our bus broke down on a bridge. It was raining and none of the cars would stop and help us. Finally the cops stopped," said Dallas.

Going to different schools and "meeting new people and new guys is always a lot of fun," said Freshman TeNeil Moore.

Unfortunately, not everyone has good luck in meeting new people. Senior Laurie Harvey recalls one strange experience in Kingsville. "We were on our way to the restroom and school was still in progress. There were some guys there making obscene noises and after I came back, I advised anyone else going to go in groups!"

Juggling grades, parental and coach pressures can drive some people crazy. With tennis, you just beat a ball up with a racket.

"It's hard to get up on mornings of tournaments," said Freshman Tika Bertsch. "Once all the sleep is out of your eyes, it's fun."

Not many people can play tennis with their eyes closed such as Junior Clay Martin.

"At this particular tournament, I wasn't able to play with my partner, Cindy Diekey," said Senior Darla Dallas.

JV practice usually lasts for two hours after school on Monday thru Thursday.

"Playing with one ball in my hand has always been a habit for me," said Junior Katherine Graham.

CROSS Country COUNTRY

The cross-country team had an excellent season this year as they ran their way to the regional meet at UTSA in San Antonio after capturing district honors.

"It was a matter of self-motivation. You got to want to do it," said sophomore Heather Webb.

Despite the small team, runners woke up and ran at 6:30 a.m. every morning fighting freezing temperatures and misting rain.

"We did what we had had to do. We were prepared," said freshman Peter Baron.

"It takes a lot of dedication, determination, and guts to live through the pain," said Tammy Guzman. "Cross-country was a long tiring experience."

Cross-country running is totally different from track. The runners have to run in parking lots, over trees, up hills and down hills. If it snowed in Beeville, they would probably run through that too.

"We had a real strong team this year," said Coach Evans. "We had a lot of students place in practice meets for a team of our size."

Varsity Basketball

A roar of ten sets of Nike shoes follow a ball around the court that excites the fan's senses. They get emotional as the team scatters for possession. It's just another action-packed basketball game at JHS.

"I feel that basketball is the attraction to a school and is one of the centers of attention," said manager Patricia Tapia.

This year the team did quite well. With a 14-11 overall record, the team improved in passing, jump shots, and especially shooting.

Despite the tough competition, team members were satisfied with their season. "We could have worked a little harder on offense, especially with the tougher competition," said Senior Michael Robinson.

"Concentration is the key. You have to keep your mind on the ball and not on your surroundings," said Senior Larry Hoch.

"Fouls were made, but because of carelessness, we could have done worse, but we didn't," said Senior Steve Scotten.

According to Coach Mike Luce, the winning sensation that a player can feel is an inspiration to motivate an entire team.

"Everyone loves to win, but the way a team plays can also determine the winners," said Senior Roland Salazar.

"Even if we didn't always win, I felt as though we did," said Senior Reagan Scott. Risa Botello.

1990 was the epitome of David and Goliath.

With teams such as Calallen (who eventually took the state title) and G-P in the district, Beeville fared well despite the team's small size. Boasting a very successful 17-13 overall record, the Lady Trojans finished fourth in the district title race.

With two sophomores and a freshman playing on the team, they really had to go out on the court and make a name for themselves. "This is our best year so far, we got 4th in district and I was really pleased," said sophomore Heather Webb.

"Record-wise, we did pretty good," said Coach Darryl Beasley.

"The girls had high expectations but we made some mistakes that eliminated us. The girls should be proud for what they've accomplished."

Calallen by far was their toughest opponent. "Just because they're from Calallen, we let them walk all over us when we could of had a better game," said Sophomore Joy Taylor.

Not only were the games hard, but so were the practices. Long hours of learning more and better skills to improve their games. "I feel like I got something out of it," said Senior Bernice Rodriguez, "The harder the practice, the more satisfaction I got."

It's really quite simple once you think about.

The object of the game is to bounce the ball down court and drop it in a little net.

Of course there are obstacles in the way like hulking guards, refs watching your every mood, and crowds that will hiss at any mistake.

For the freshmen, they took the game in stride racking up an impressive 15-6 season record under the coaching abilities of Mark Monroe.

"After a game that they've won, while they're all hot and sweaty, we felt like we've all pulled together as a team instead of a few individuals," said Monroe.

Todd Smith holds similar views. "The coach never singled any individual out. He worked with us as if we were all equal."

That thought was the essence of the freshman team. "With teamwork, the season picked up to start the game we would pray as a team," said Kyle Roberts.

Although the team started dropping a few games at the end of the season, they felt like they've accomplished many fundamentals that will be useful later on in their high school years. "The team pulled together, we all participated to our fullest. The season didn't end as well as we intended, but we never let our spirit down," said Victor Ortiz.

Being on the freshmen team some feel is more difficult than the others. First of all, the players are in a different school where grades are more important. Second of all, classes are more difficult as everyone tries to find that ever-important social clique.

GIRL'S Basketball BASKETBALL

The season brought disappointments for the J.V. girls basketball team, but confidence and strength held it together through the tough times.

Whether it be baseball, football, or basketball, games will be lost and won. Lessons and the ability to learn from these mistakes helps a team emotionally and physically when faced with another challenge. "I learned how not to be a bad loser and that defeat doesn't always have its privileges," said Sophomore Jana Juarez.

Many agree that the love for playing basketball is the one reason they continue play. "To them it's not a sport but a lot of fun," said Sophomore Monica Garcia.

Team unity is one key aspect to a well rounded team. The ability to work together helps improve the team on or off the court. "I found myself improving more and more throughout the season," said Sophomore Julie Luna.

"Hopefully they learned something that will enable them to become successful Varsity players," said Coach Birdsong. "Anybody can see that a #1 team is the one who gives one hundred percent, plays real hard, and defeats other good teams," Monica Casarez.

Success didn't come easy for Freshmen girls this season. No matter how hard you try sometimes, you can't always accomplish what you want.

"It was a good season even though we didn't do that well at most of our games," said Tammy Rendon. "We kept our spirits up and tried to stay optimistic."

"This season shows what potential that these girls have. They are hard and determined workers," said Coach Larry Lollar.

The girls had high goals which they still are reaching for. "Although we didn't win as often as we wanted, playing as much as we did gave a chance to improve our playing skills," said Lori Gallego.

Attendance at games didn't help the girls get much recognition. "I liked going to games because no matter what is happening, it helps know that someone is rooting for you," said Sophomore LeeAnn Massengall.

You can't keep a good player down and with as much energy as these young ladies possess it will be an exciting experience to see what they have in store for next year. April Alaniz.

What can one say about baseball?

It's not a contact sport, there's no timer ticking away, and exciting moments are few and far between. So what makes someone go out for this sport?

"Baseball is a game in which you have to use your mind to concentrate — it's not just whether or not you have the athletic ability," said John Garcia.

"We didn't do as well as we thought we would this year," said JV coach Todd Nix. "Many of the team members got moved up for next year."

"Playing at Bee County College made a big difference for us," said Jeff Fish. "It gave us some inspiration to someday play in college or better yet, the League."

Although this might be a good indicator of next year's team, Beeville Trojan pride was never lowered.

"I don't think our record showed how well we played. We fared all right against schools with bigger and tougher squads," said Eddie Guerra.

According to the players we spoke to, the audience's participation is what kept the team inspired to do their best — especially the parents.

"My family always made an effort to see our games," said Dean Ford. "I remember one time that the sky was all gray and the wind was really blowing. It must have been around 40 degrees. But, my family just watched under a heap of blankets." Jason Hardin

Get out of the way! Senior Ricardo Jimenez scores in the Flour Bluff game. FB eventually knocks Beeville out of the playoffs.

Hit it! Senior Troy Peters hits a Grand Slam in the game against Gregory Portland.

This year's Varsity baseball team can be described as one of ups and downs. The team was second in district and missed entering the play-offs by one strike. Winding up with one of the best records in history, the hard work really shone through.

"Robstown and Flour Bluff were good teams but we would just put ourselves in a bad position to where they would take advantage of that," said Senior Joel Martinez.

"Robstown was the hardest team we had to play, we had to not only play against a hard disciplined team but against noisy fans, tradition and comments from the press," said Senior, Benjamin Garza.

The number of spectators grew considerably as the team continued to win key games. "Our competitiveness rose this year as we tasted victory. We had good strides and good skill level and also a building of good character," said head coach Tom Carrera.

Senior player Sam Zavaleta said, "I think we did good and we improved. We played as a team and never gave up, especially during rough times."

"We had a good team but made a few mistakes and from that we shall have a better team next year," said Junior Danny Rey Garcia.

"We have one of the best teams in state and I say that because we surprised and turned many heads when playing. After everything that happened this year, the wins, and the heart-breaking losses, it will be a team to be reckoned with next year," said Junior Eric Cantu.

All the player's disappointment was missing the play-offs by one game. After beating a state-ranked team, or all the times they got bruised or hurt, they were and will always be ready to get out and play ball no matter what.

to the finish. Sophomore Jessica Gonnion strides the toughest part of a race. The final 50 meters in the competition can either make or break the runner as exhaustion takes control. To help alleviate this problem, coaches have to emphasize a steady stride or pacing.

With a total of six meets this year, Beeville's rank improved over that of last year. Team members shared some thoughts on their season.

"In a sport such as this you have to pull together and really work as a team," said Freshman Tracy Brown.

Girls coach Jerry Birdsong has positive feelings about the efforts the girls gave. "Every year the girls get better, the strides they take to improve are very encouraging."

Towards district there were quite a few injuries, which resulted in some unpreparedness.

"Injuries such as shin splints caused some problems but when your running you have to ignore the pain and keep going," said Junior Debbi Larson.

Most practices lasted anywhere from one and half hours up to two for some. "Practice sometimes became monotonous, mainly because you do the same kind of running each day," said Sophomore Heather Webb.

"You have to have determination or else you will never accomplish your goals," said Sophomore Joy Taylor.

"It takes a lot of concentration to run when you have the heat and body fatigue to worry about," said sophomore Jessica Gonnion.

With only two Seniors leaving, the future of next year's track team is promising. "I am going to miss the running and those trips on the bus," said Senior Linda Flores.

On your marks ... Get set ... Go! Varsity runner Joy Taylor jumps from the blocks in the competitive 200 meter sprint.

BOYS Track TRACK

The boys track team had a lot going for it, not to mention its size and ability. With only four seniors leaving this year, the team definitely went places.

"To get ourselves psyched up, the JV team would run against the varsity. This made us more competitive and able to excel," said sophomore Peter Baron.

Before practice, all members must run quarter miles around the track in addition to miles of sprinting, stretching, and exercises. Long distance runners ran approximately five miles a day — all under the scorching South Texas sun.

"Every day after school, the kids would sacrifice their free time to come back at four and stay until six," said coach Mark Monroe.

It takes a lot of dedication to want to be the best. "All the hard work paid off as you can tell in the district meet," said James Wheatley.

"With the help of our coaches, we reached our fullest potential," said Michael Gonzales. "It's scary competing against bigger guys from bigger schools, but we were taught that self-confidence is half the ball game."

Many runners felt that they started fitting into the groove as the season progressed. "As the season progressed, we started to improve our times and distances," said Frank Dominguez.

"Although this is my last year, I feel that all the late nights I stayed out running and all the Saturdays I gave up for track, it was all worth it," said senior Michael Todd.

"I have high hopes for next year," said John McTea.

BOY'S And Girls' Golf AND GIRL'S GOLF

Small Team Strives For Perfection

Imagine walking as far as Cross Country runs everyday. Then imagine the 90 degree heat and humidity that's part of the South Texas climate. Put it all together, and you have the golf teams.

"I thought it was very hard, especially practice, but the pressure lessened and it turned out to be different," said Sophomore Viola Hernandez.

The pressure, distractions from the crowd and the game itself are just one of the many downs of Golf. "Golf was very hard and complicated. But, at the same time, it was a life experience, a challenge, and a chance to represent JHS," said Sophomore Elodia Campos.

The way that golf plays requires the talents of the whole team in competition. At a tournament, the scores of all the players are added together to get the overall score. The team with the lowest score wins.

“At tournaments, it was really neat because all everybody from other schools talked about was golf.”
Michael Martinez

“I felt like I was under a lot of pressure and would burn out real easily. But, this was a neat way to spend an afternoon on the course with Ms. Breslen.”

Top row from left Evan Dolezal, Shad Higdon, Dale Combs, Michael Martinez, Greg Parker, Harry Hughes. Bottom row Brandon Hartman, John Gutierrez, Daniel Smejkal, Jack Higdon, Cory Boemer.

The coach's job is not only to teach the basics and fundamentals, but to motivate, inspire, and to be there through tribulations. "She (Coach Cindy Breslen) is an inspiring coach. We benefited from her being there," said Sophomore Evan Dolezal.

"She's good and she knows her business," said Junior Daniel Smejkal.

"Golf is a complicated game. They can only practice in the daylight, and sometimes it is very limited especially during the winter months when the days are short," said Coach Cindy Breslen.

For each player there is a different, more meaningful highlight of the season. "I played at North Shore, and shot the lowest score of the year," said junior Micheal Martinez.

"Hitting range balls and putting are playing highlights of my entire season," said Evan Dolezal.

Juniors Lari Fernandez, Melissa Garcia, Chelsea Taylor and Jason Hudson hold back a statue at a yearbook convention in Arlington.

Playing to perfection Senior Scott Gray plays at a regular Friday night game during half-time.

"Not many people realize how demanding being in extra-curricular activities can be," said Senior James Maroon.

"One of my fondest memories after I graduate will have been working on the school play," said Renee McCleary. "I plan to attend college here, after that ... who knows?"

YOU ANIMAL

They can be cuddly and cute or scary and vicious. Postmen hate them while children adore them. Maybe you're allergic to them or maybe you just don't like them. The subject at hand: animals.

Freshman Veronica Rodriguez is the proud owner of one talented lizard named Fred. "He loves to get dizzy and fall from the ceiling onto my bed."

"My dog Ralph is allergic to everything," said sophomore Donald McGriff. "It's like taking care of a baby."

Maybe your pet has a sleep-over and all my friends were adoring my cat Peggy. Someone picked her up the wrong way and she expelled out some intestinal gases," said Senior Daisy Loya.

"I was supposed to let the dogs out, but I forgot to and when I came home with a friend of mine, the smell in the living room would have choked a horse. I was never so embarrassed," said Freshman Tika Bersch.

Living conditions for pets can be very irregular. "Our parrot Max jumped up on the ceiling fan one day while the fan was still moving," said Junior Heather Donovan.

Although our pets they are sometimes troublesome and wacky, we would never trade them for the world.

Everyone has had days where it seemed the whole world was watching you. Maybe there was a slight rip in your pants that went unnoticed until 6th period, or some lettuce stuck between your teeth.

"I remember when I walked around school the whole day with gum on the seat of my pants," said Junior Jaime Martinez.

Some people seem to lose track of time. "I felt real silly when I walked into my 3rd period class when it was only second," said Senior Joe Garcia.

"I was dressing in the junior girls restroom when this guy just wandered in for a peek," said Junior Irme Lee. "I'm not sure if he did it on purpose, but I haven't seen him since."

"It didn't actually embarrass me, but I was cruising around town one day when my ex-boyfriend's new girlfriend started following me. I'm still not sure why," said Junior Liane Mahoney.

"My friend and I were in George West one night cruising around and we could not find the Dairy Queen. No one would give us directions," said Sophomore Shrisse Reed.

You're behind the wheel. Taking drivers education is a must for every high school student who wants to drive at 16.

"I'm not sure when my parents are going to buy me my own car, but my Dad's truck will surely do until then," said Sophomore Marianne Awalt.

"Having a truck can be a lot of roomy enough to carry things, it's also small enough to turn people who want a ride," said Sophomore Aaron Lemly.

I'M IN CONTROL

ne of the fortunate Sophomores to own her own automobile, Krissy Manuszak, enjoys wasting gas on cruising the town. "Juicy takes me everywhere I need to go."

True freedom comes with the possession of a set of keys. With that responsibility comes payments, insurance, gas and new friends.

"I had this wacky driving instructor," said Sophomore Angie Moore. "He always seemed to get off the subject of driving and sometimes off the road."

"I haven't gotten my license yet, but when I do, I want to make sure to keep my privileges and my parents' trust," said Sophomore Shana Sappore.

"Most of my friends and I take turns going in each other's cars," said Sophomore Jennifer Medina. "People trying to get rides have not caused a problem yet."

Although many of the people interviewed admitted that their parents were helping, some are taking things in their own hands. "I am getting a summer job and paying for everything," said Junior Clay Martin.

"I like the idea that I took care of everything myself," said Junior Chelsea Taylor. "It's my car, and I can do what I want to."

Being involved in an accident can happen to any driver at any time. "This older lady just pulled out in front of me," said Sophomore Carrie Haugen. "I was pretty scared since I had only had my license a month."

"My accident made me a more cautious driver. I was just cruising in front of Stars and it happened so quick, it can really put a person in their place," said Junior Katherine Graham. Kathy Hanson.

Surrounded by literature. Sophomores Becky Chacon and Vicky Contreras attempt to study for finals. During mid-term you can find the library practically full.

A STEP UP

"Dare to be different — when people have to stop and do a second take of you, it makes you feel unlike the ordinary Beevillian," said Sophomore Shrisse Reed. "My advice for freshman — party out!"

"Being a Freshman in symphonic band is pretty cool. People are sometimes surprised, but it's not that hard," said Joe Adeock with Freshman Todd Smith.

The Freshman year in high school is very unique and memorable. So maybe a few of us went to the wrong classes and accidentally ran into a senior twice our size. Let's take a reality break and see what some freshman think . . .

"The key to meeting a lot more people is being in sports, it helps you fit in better," said Dana Johanson.

Joining organizations and other activities may surely help your social life, but academically, how are many of the freshman doing in class?

"They are full of energy and excitement, they are not afraid to do things that upperclassmen might not want to," said physical science teacher Hortensia Brooks.

"There will always be students in each class who are satisfied with just getting by," said Cherry McClintock.

Although the days of initiation are long gone, how do some upperclassmen view the "fish"?

"I think it's mean when some of the freshman get called names, everybody was a freshman once," said Junior Leti Fernandez.

"Being immature and silly is just a stage which everyone goes through. Some people grow out of it and some stay there their whole lives," said Senior Donna Ausbrooks.

Whether it is just a stage or not, it is definitely unforgettable!

Waking up Monday mornings here at A.C. Jones it is the hardest day of the week to wake up. "Probably because they have slept late all week end and they interrupted their sleep pattern," said freshman Monica Valdez or just because "They don't want to start a new week," said Freshman Tammy Rendon.

Waking up on Monday can also be hard because when you think about a new week of work and homework. That is enough to keep anyone in bed.

The other days school are easier to get up because it is one less day to get up until the weekend.

Many students agree that if we had more competitive programs, it may help build character. "I'd like to play higher teams, it seems to make a person want to work harder," said Senior Bernice Rodriguez.

Demands for men's volleyball and soccer have been strongly expressed. Weight programs for the girls at our school would also be beneficial. "The equipment provided by the school doesn't always help me," said Junior Chris Taylor.

KEEPING THE PLACE GOING

Ever stop and wonder who takes care of absences or the amount of paperwork involved for course scheduling?

To some, it might seem like a job that takes care of itself overnight. But to those people who work there, they know the hard work they put in is a necessary function on campus.

"What is the most tedious is making sure that every dot on the bubble sheets (teacher's grades) is filled in correctly," said registrar Ruth Kircher.

Everybody at some time or another has dealt with these ladies. It's an unsung job that must be appreciated.

Always on her toes High School secretary Pat Herzog keeps the office running smoothly despite the fact a filing cabinet fell on her earlier this year.

Always busy Registrar Ruth Kircher is responsible for withdrawing students as well as enrolling them.

Attendance secretary Judy Bridge says that she can usually spot kids trying to get away with imposterous excuses.

If you step into the counselor's office during any period of the day, you'd find the place bustling with activity.

Between Ruth Kircher's withdrawal forms, Colleen Powell's ringing phone, and counselors going here and there every minute, the office might resemble 5:00 rush hour.

"No matter how busy they are, they always find the time to help me talk over my problems," said freshman Brandy Thomas.

A counselor's job mainly deals with monitoring students' credits, obtaining scholarships for seniors, and administering achievement tests. They also deal with a few occasional parents.

"I've been very pleased with the response I've gotten from the counselor's," said parent Maria Garcia.

"If any student has problems at home or with their schoolwork, we are trained to help them solve their problems," said Emilia Dominguez.

However, the staff deals mainly with overseeing that state-mandated laws are carried out. This includes House Bill 72 and the new attendance laws for high school credit.

KEEPING THE SCHOOL

"Where are you going for dinner?"

"I don't know, where are you going?"

187 times a school year, everybody on campus has this conversation sooner or later.

There's many places you can chow down at lunchtime but deciding on a place to go takes a lot of debate. After all, not every school has a wide array of choices like McDonald's, Burger King, Gerardo's or Long John Silver's. With all the fast food gourmet eateries, it's easy to find a culinary delight to satisfy even the most finicky taste buds.

"Hamburgers, Chicken Tenders, Hamburgers, Chicken Tenders, and maybe an occasional Frito Pic or fish is what I'll usually eat for lunch," said junior Melissa Garcia. "Since my dad works at Star's, I can recite the whole menu by heart."

One of the key factors in deciding what food to eat is whether or not you know someone who has a car. Finding a car early in the morning is almost as important as that algebra test first period or that English quiz in third.

"Walking is for nerds," said freshman Shannon Duncan. "It doesn't matter if the restaurant is right across the street."

"I like to go home for lunch," said teacher Donna Guckian. "I like to watch game shows like Bumper Stumpers and Name That Tune."

One alternative to the fast food diet is the local cafeteria. "Whenever I'm in a lazy mood — like when I don't want to walk or none of my friends have a car — we'll eat in the cafeteria," said freshman Angela Arciba.

Burger Boats, Encladas, Pigs In a Blank Smorgasbord, Hoagies, Steak and Chicken nuggets are just some of the things served during fourth and fifth lunch. Funds are running low, you could always eat at the snack bar or buy a Coke in the patio, sit down, and catch up on all the latest gossip.

Do what you can, stop it. Noises in class aren't cool.

In any other newsroom you'd hear discussions about the decline of communism in Europe, the homeless, religion, politics, or any other social problem.

However, everything in Beeville marches to a different drumbeat. The main topic of debate at The Trojan newspaper?

"The 'T' in the nameplate is so ugly," said senior Melissa Zambrano. "It looks like it's moving all over the place."

Aside from the trivial, student journalists made a marked improvement in the quality of the publication from the story content to the layout.

With Tina Loredo as editor, along with some practice editors and Lisa Trejo as business manager, the paper came out regularly once a month.

"What I like doing best of all is to put together the center spread," said junior Cori Longoria. "It's exciting to decide on a topic of interest and then to place all the elements together on a page."

DANCING IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Drill Team is not all glitter and gold. The Trojanettes are always in the spotlight and under pressure. Many of the girls have experienced disappointment as well as achievement.

"It's not just a job it's an adventure," said Freshman Valerie Balderas. Anything they do or participate in, always takes hard work and dedication, but it also has its 'ups and downs'.

"This year I am looking forward to a larger squad, and participating in more school functions such as attending basketball games," said sponsor Cherissa

Crawford.

Like many prospering organizations, Drill Team will undergo many changes in the coming year. For instance, the future Freshmen will be exiled (see page 294 in the Webster Dictionary) from the Drill Team. "I feel Freshmen need to settle into high school because many ended up flunking classes, and there was a lot of immaturity," said Cherissa Crawford.

They may not be the Laker Girls or the Da Cowboy's Cheerleaders, but with a little practice it's something they aspire to become.

Just For Kicks Kicks are just one of the fundamentals to perfect. It's hard to get everything in sync — especially when there are 18 legs.

All Work No Play When it comes to choreographing the routine, sophomore, Teri Placker is very serious. "It takes maturity to gain the respect and cooperation of my peers."

Just For The Fun of It Freshman Vanessa Ramirez lets the laughter loose as Leslie Molina tries to look like Cher with a new hair style and head gear.

Hard At Work Drill Team sponsor, Cherissa Crawford, motivates the Trojancettes through grueling and draining practices that last sometimes over 5 hours.

Along For the Ride The Trojancettes enjoy the free ride along the parade route during the Western Week Parade Celebration. This is the first year they got to ride in the car.

TURN THE BEAT AROUND

It's the middle of summer. While all the other students are at home watching the soaps, sleeping, and swimming, band members were going through the same routines: Keep in step, mark time, and start off on your left foot (your other left!).

"On the field, we have over 150 people marching to the same routine. Summer practices give us an edge for the first game," said Freshman B. J. Stiles.

The culmination of the season is marching contest held at Tuloso-Midway. Although the band earned a II rating, the score still stands for excellent.

"I felt that we worked really hard over the summer and I think we deserved to have gotten a first division," said Freshman Jerry Martinez.

Other than to create music, band instills a love of music while working as a team to create one tune. "Being drum major enabled me to use my leadership abilities in directing the band," said Senior Kelleigh Smith.

As for next year's plans, Sophomore Monica Casarez said "The only way is up."

It seems like a dream come true for students who sit in class and day-dream about leaving school at lunchtime and go directly to work.

But for some, DEKA, VOCT, and BPA which make up Vocational Education, is extremely hard work while at the same time rewarding.

"Being out in the work force early will help me out in the long run," said Senior Deanna Garcia who works in the library at Tyler School.

Laura Rothlisberger replaced Debbie Moehnke as BPA sponsor during the second semester because she took a position at the Central Office. "I really miss the kids, but I try to keep in touch with them," Moehnke said. The advisor's job is to contact business to make employment placements.

"VOCT gives a student an opportunity to get on the job training in the field he wishes to pursue in their adult life as well as teaching them how a business is run," said senior Juan Segovia.

"I feel that this organization is helping me out for the reason that it really improves our working habits and motivates us for the future," said senior George Bernal.

Working hard for the money Senior Roland Perez enjoys his job at K-Mart.

How can I help you? Senior Shelly Garza spends her time after school and on weekends at Burger King.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

"I've decided to become a Home Economics teacher," said sophomore Lisa Perez. This is one of the many reasons why organizations — including Future Homemakers of America — exist on campus.

"We try our best to get recognized to the public," said Junior Terry Belcher. One way FHA is gaining more exposure is becoming more involved with the community. "We made Easter Baskets for children and that makes me feel good," she said.

"I feel if it weren't for Mrs. Guckian, Mrs. McKay, Graham or Fuller, we wouldn't be able to do anything without them," said senior Daisy Loya.

While FHA consists mainly of girls, the club is open for everyone. The highlights of the year include workshops, trips, concession stands, and meetings.

"People can't believe in this club, but it's good to help me when I'm on my own," said sophomore Dominguez.

Moo Moo! Oink Oink! Bah Bah! This is just a sample of what Ag is all about.

Future Farmers of America has had a heavy schedule this year which kicked off with a fundraiser at the Diez y Seis Festival. Other fundraisers include snack bar stands and football concession stands. FFA members were recognized during Western Week.

"Being a member of the FFA has meant a lot to me. Parliamentary Procedure contests helped me learn the proper way to conduct business meetings," said Senior FFA Treasurer Stacy Mixon.

According to many members, this organization goes beyond cows and pigs. "People are so misguided in what they think we represent. It is making something from hard work and dedication," said Sophomore Jana Juare.

"A lot of people think you have to be a cowboy or kicker to really enjoy it, but there's more fun to it than meets the eye," said Mixon.

Along with the personal satisfaction comes the great financial rewards. "I'll never forget when I won $928 on my hog at the Bee County Livestock Show," said Sophomore Ruben Guerrero.

"This has been my first year in FFA and it has been a great way of meeting people," said Junior Linda Ruiz.

Most members usually stay with FFA all through high school and go on to pursue careers in this field. "I understand a lot more about agriculture than I used to," said Junior Sweetheart Kerri Vickers.

For an organization that is sometimes dismissed, it has some of the best kept potential in our school. Daisy Loya.

Isn't it sweet? Kerri Vickers and Walter Wright were chosen from their peers as this year's Ag Sweetheart and Beau.

Move 'em in! Beauty pageant contestants beware, here comes Ruben Guerrero with a hog for all seasons.

THE SMALL WORLD OF MILLIE McIVOR

Starstruck, A Star is Born, That's Entertainment, and Another Opening of Another Show. What may seem to be a scary to most people is just a fact of life to the Poor Boy Players and Thespians.

"Acting — I love it! To tell you the truth, it gets my mind off to things," said senior Rendee McCleery.

For One Act Play competition, the troupes performed "The Small World of Millie McIvor" which is about a widowed dressmaker trying to find romance in the Eighteen Century.

When the show competed at district, some cast members received awards for their performances. Honorable mention honors went to Peter Baron and Rendee McCleery. Lyz Latson placed on the All-Star Cast.

"Everyone put so much effort into making it perfect, and I love all my kids for it," said sponsor Serena Wright.

What the audience sees on stage is half the production. Months before a show is put on, props have to be gathered, costumes must be designed and made, scenery must be constructed, and auditions must be held.

"Whenever I audition for a play, I get real worried because I don't know how good my competition will be," said Kim Durment. "But things have a way of turning out fine."

"I had the hardest time trying to find some antique furniture and some floral print fabric for the set," said Wright. "But when I did find these items, the set improved drastically."

Once a person is picked to play a certain character, many times they will research that person to become more like him.

"My character Toby was real mischievous. Because of my joking around nature, I guess I was sort of a natural for the part," said Bernard Leal.

Players know that they must put in many hours after school to practice.

"It was hard trying to coordinate everybody's schedule so we could have some good practices," said junior Lyz Latson.

The Thespians officers consists of Jo Medina, president; Lyz Latson, vice president; Maria Christensen, secretary; Bernard Leal, treasurer; Kim Durment, clerk; and Aaron Smith, historian.

Poorboy Player officers were: Latson, president; Cristella Flores, vice president; Durment, reporter; and Smith as historian.

FROM THE OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

The following text was provided by this year's AFS student Veronica Jordao.

I felt so surprised and happy because I was one of the 66 candidates for two scholarships and was lucky enough to receive it. When I arrived here in America, I didn't know what to expect, but living here has given me some of the most unforgettable experiences.

I have met a lot of new people and discovered things that I never would have imagined.

I was fortunate on my

arrival to Beeville to have a good family. The Flores' have helped me out with my English, which was my biggest barrier. My host sisters (Linda and Tammy Flores) helped me with certain slangs and other translations.

People in Brazil have different outlooks on Texas. I was very surprised, because I figured there would be plenty of cowboys and mountains. Well, I haven't seen one mountain, and the only cowboys I've seen have been in rodeos. But nonetheless, the people here are warm and friendly — their hospitality reputation precedes them well.

Other than perception differences, there are many geographical differences. I live on a mountain, Petropolis, which has a population of 200,000 and we are only 60 miles away from Rio. Though at times the climates are similar, the humidity is unreal. But, one learns to adapt.

School in Brazil is quite different than here in America. We have three years in high school, with school beginning in March and ending in November. Unlike Jones, we have no extra-curricular activities.

The dress at school is very simple. Girls don't focus their attention on use of make up or hair spray. We don't care use a lot of that stuff which is considered essential to girls here.

Living here has made me more conscious of the world around me. I will always have friends in Beeville and central South Texas.

Student Leadership Banquet — 1990

Recipe for a good time: You take 150 of the best leaders on campus, add organization sponsors, mix in faculty cooks for deliciously prepared BBQ, and throw in a dash of gold pins. Once it stews in the patio for two hours, you've just had the first annual Student Leadership Banquet.

"The banquet was held to acknowledge all the fine leaders of A.C. Jones High School," said vice-principal Everett MacAulay, one of the organizers.

Come and get it. Principals Everett MacAulay and Gerald Boyer, fix dinner at the Student Leadership Banquet.

Smile you're on candid camera! James Myers and Jessie Alonzo wait to be served a plate of that delicious grub.

"Anytime you can honor students for their achievements I feel you should," said tennis Coach Mitch Luna. "It's simply giving credit where credit is due."

The Bar-B-Q, which was celebrated on the patio on April 24, consisted of a variety of foods cooked and served by Paul Jaure, Carlos Cantu, Gerald Boyer, and MacAulay.

"The Bar-B-Q was really great, it was fun sitting and talking with friends you don't get to see everyday. The food was "yummy" and the entertainment was wonderful," said Sophomore Jana Jaure.

"I liked it because it showed how many fine leaders we have in our school," said Senior Stacey Mixson.

It takes a lot out of a student to be a leader and uphold their grades to be eligible all at the same time. This is one reason why the banquet was held — to show the student that their hard work has not gone unnoticed.

"The Student Leadership Bar-B-Q was fun. You were able to meet and recognize many leaders. The B-B-Q even tasted right," said Senior Ricardo Jimenez.

All leaders were representing their organizations whether it was FFA to Homecoming to athletic team captains.

"The Student Leadership B-B-Q is something I hope becomes an annual event. Students should be honored for all their abilities especially when they prove to be peer leaders," said Counselor Mary Joy.

Next year promises to be even better as a new recipe will be concocted every year.

"I don't get to see that many "WINNERS" under one roof all at the same time," said Cantu. A. Mancuso

Open wide! Sophomore Lisa Perez and Senior Terry Cook sit down to enjoy one of A.C. Jones' best cooked meals ever.

Dah George, what'd you say? Sophomore Glager Eernisse shows her enthusiasm at the banquet.

Are we allowed to have fourths? Junior Spencer Wayne washes down his meal with some tea.

Who's that Girl? Homemaking teacher Donna Guckian shows off her granddaughter to Special Ed teacher Gwen Webb.

A final farewell flower was given by elementary students to members of the Academic Decathlon team at a pep rally before they competed at region.

AT THE TOP OF THE MOUNTAIN

Do you think two heads are better than one?
 Only nine of them.
 Less than one percent of all students on campus can say they were on the Academic Decathlon team. The other 12 others can only be proud. For those who are chosen to make the team, the year ahead fills out countless hours of studying history, music, math, literature, and other fine arts. It's so exciting and fun to be in a room full of smart, intellectual people," said junior Cindy Cantu. "Imagine — a class where academic performance is everything."
 To be on the team, a student's name must be submitted to the AD sponsors by one of that person's teachers. Next comes the personal interview to find out which topic that student can excel in. After that, the members of the team are chosen for their abilities.

"It felt like a job interview," said junior Tania Vincent. "I wanted to make the team so bad."

According to Jonnie Jordan, one of the sponsors with her husband history teacher Reagan Jordan, Academic Decathlon team members take a humanities course. "This class provides basic preparation in all of the ten areas," said Mrs. Jordan. "It also takes adequate independent study along with working with subject are teachers such as math and science."

At regional competition held in McAllen, the JHS team had a strong showing placing ninth out of over 26 teams from San Antonio all the way to the Valley. Individually, Khryscynna Carter received a first place medal in language and literature, fifth place for her essay, and sixth place in the history category; senior Joshua Palmatier received a third place medal for language and literature, fifth place in fine arts, and was the high point scorer for the team; Cheryl Elligan placed fourth in language and literature and sixth place in essay; James Ray earned fifth place in language and literature and seventh place in science; Rob Wingenter placed sixth in language and literature while Cindy Cantu placed sixth in essay.

There are three levels of competition: varsity, scholastic, and honors being the most challenging.

"I'm proud to have met a challenge. I learned responsibility and self-discipline," said Shelly Garza. "If I was granted one wish, I would love to be on the team again."

Something should change the saying: nine heads are better than one.

The scene of the crime? Members of Katherine Boemer's health class were given a CPR demonstration by local paramedics on a training model.

I told you never to call me here Photographers exposed algebra teacher Dolores Rios talking to an unknown party during her conference period.

Fa la la la Choir director Don Zidlicky conducted the choir which earned an excellent rating at the concert and sight reading contest.

Don't scarf me Sophomore Irma Gonzalez looks puzzled at Annie Garcia as she appears to be praying. (She probably was just meditating on her next class).

But will they print money? Senior Tammy Potter was a worker in the print shop where she and others in the class printed programs, tickets, and other items.

The look of love Senior Kathy Garcia was performed all these zany escapades during football games despite the scorching temperature inside the costume.

Silent study time Stephanie Wayne and sophomore Reynaldo Flores were caught going over notes a few minutes before a test (some say they were busted).

Have a Coke and a smile Junior Nino Martinez was resting on the patio eating a taquito. We put this picture in because he has that look of surprise.

The Apple Dumpling Gang Not really, but Freshmen James Wheatley and Peter Baron were seen taking a shortcut through the 100 wing during gym.

Talk about learning style Sophomore Donna Holcomb would have gotten into big trouble if one of the librarians had seen her reading in this position.

SENIORS GET SKUNKED BY FACULTY

The game: volleyball. The players: seniors and faculty. The outcome: Faculty 3, Seniors 1.

"There wasn't any fairness at all," said senior Chris Hosinski. "The teachers got to break the rules and we didn't!"

Despite who called controversy, the hard fact remained that young teenagers were soundly defeated by old, out of shape teachers. "We showed them our stuff and put them in their place!" said joyful English teacher Jeanine Cantwell.

"We should have won," said Laura Rothlisberger. "But the guys kept trying to take over the game."

Winning the first game but badly losing the next three, the seniors claim unfair competition because all the coaches were playing. Well, they are teachers, aren't they?

To add to the excitement of the game, both teams had their own cheerleaders. While Steve Scotten, Chris Hosinski, and Michael Todd along with some other anonymous "girls" (and boy were they ugly) the faculty was doing all they could to ignore them.

"They kept jumping onto the court taunting us and trying to break our concentration," said Coach Darryl Beasley.

Do the Wave Heather Weider and Jeanine Cantwell motivate the losing sideline seniors.

Rah Rah Sis Boom Bah Steve Scotten and Armando Gonzales show their more feminine qualities.

Coach Larry Lollar, Mrs. Torres (who defeated her son) and an unidentified teacher wait for the winning point.

The battle of the generations Teachers take revenge on seniors after putting up with them for four years. This sweet victory was the moment they had been waiting as the seniors met their demise.

A real identity crisis Trying to break the concentration of server and teacher Gail Griffin, seniors got their just desserts.

A bunch of hams If these are how real cheerleaders might look like, they'd be called dogs for sure.

Cheer of the crowds To witness the agony of the senior's defeat, plenty of spectators were on hand.

Don't hate me because I'm beautiful. Junior Jennifer Jackson vogues for the team before tennis practice.

WHY ME?

EVERYONE HAS THOSE MOMENTS WHEN ALL THE EYES ARE STARING BECAUSE OF EMBARRASSMENT

Let's face it. Everyone has had their share of clumsy mistakes which inevitably seems to happen at the wrong time.

An unbuttoned zipper, falling flat on your face, or being called down in front of the entire class triggers that nervous feeling in your stomach as you feel your face turning red and your heartbeat quicken.

The worst part is feeling thousands of eyes upon you. "Once I was cheering at a varsity football game and I fell," said Sophomore Megan Pearson.

Senior Jennifer Ramirez also suffered: "I did a kick and one of my shoes flew off."

Most of the time, so-called "friends" won't let you live the incident down. "One time, we were at basketball practice and Steven Scotten pulled down my shorts in front of everybody," said Junior Danny Rodriguez. "I'm still hearing about it."

Whenever something like that happens, you should just laugh it off. Although you feel like you could curl up into a ball and roll away, it's no big deal. "My Freshman year I got thrown in the McDonald's dumpster by three Seniors," said Junior Sean Bradley.

Sometimes the unexpected can get you in trouble. "Someone slipped a library book in my purse and as I walked out, the sensor went off," said one unnamed Freshman.

A little humility never hurt anyone. "I was standing there talking to my friends and I turned around to leave and I ran into a door," said Freshman Leslie Tindol.

Sophomore Maria Christensen experienced a different kind of basketball trip. "I was running backwards on the court when I tripped and did a backward flip."

"My most embarrassing moment happened when I fell in the hall," said Freshman Tammy Rendon. "Everyone stood there and laughed as I looked for my books."

The moral of the story is 'no matter how much you regret your blunder, life goes on and maybe you'll know what not to do next time.'

A 100% ALCOHOL FREE GOOD TIME

Let's face it. Being locked into the school is not one dream shared by everyone. It's bad enough spending eight hours a day listening to boring lectures and doing never ending assignments.

But on the night of graduation — the night of free-flowing booze, cruising, and mayhem — JHS was miraculously turned into a Hawaiian beach with plenty of sand, flamingos, palm trees, and an olympic size swimming pool (well, sort of).

"We stayed at the school every night till 2 a.m. setting up the stage, building booths, and organizing the party," said nurse Martha Maley who was one of the main organizers of this year's chemical free party.

The party began at 1:30 a.m. and lasted until 7:30 that morning. The purpose of the event is to keep the temptation of getting drunk out of reach. If a student left, his parents were called to inform them that they were on the road.

"The tacos and other foods were delicious which kept me going through the long night," said senior Gerald Carasco. And plenty of food was on hand. 200 breakfast tacos were donated by Burger King, orange juice was provided by McDonald's, and all the pizza was provided by Domino's and Pizza Hut. Subway sandwich shops even donated a 3-foot long sub with all the works.

"The following day I was exhausted and sleepy, but the sacrifice was worth it," said senior Angie Dominguez.

"I hope the alcohol free party will continue to grow in the years to come," said volunteer Esmeralda Hinojosa. Along with her, parents organized everything from the decorations to the prizes.

Prizes included a $500 scholarship, a VCR, radios, a microwave, plus tons and tons of the green stuff.

Perhaps the highlight of the evening was the talent (?) show put on by teachers which showcased the rock-n-roll era. Adorable Paula Duffy, with her itty bitsy teenie weenie yellow polka dot bikini, Michael Jackson was Coach Darrel Beasley, and our advisor Matthew Garner was the "Leader of the Pack."

"I loved and enjoyed the teacher's talent show because I never knew they had it in them," said Senior Irma Cortez.

The night ended with an auction including the money earned by the students due to participation.

Principal Gerald Boyer's face was on a twenty Everett McAulay was the ten dollar bill, and Carlos Cantu was the five. This used at the auction to buy calculators, clothes, dictionaries and other items.

Eating like he's never seen food before Senior Gerald Casasco chows down with a double decker pepperoni pan pizza provided by Domino's Pizza. Gerald was the one who designed the T-Shirts handed out free during the all-night party. The black and purple shirts bared the phrase "I'm alive thanks to the 1990 all-night party."

Nancy Lopez: look out! Senior Jeanie Galva puts on the mini-golf course to earn what affectionately came known as Boyer Bucks.

Monica Alaniz

"Don't let your high school years slip by. They go by so fast. But most of all, don't let anybody get in your way of accomplishing your dreams."

Scott Gray

"I will miss the freedom that I have to live as I make my own decisions with God's guidance. I'm in command of my education because at the Naval Academy, the responsibility will be heavy."

Dawn Bomersbach

"Have fun! These years are supposed to be the best years of one's life. But, study because there are plenty of years to do what you didn't get to do while in high school."

Rebecca Pawlik

"I'm going to miss my friends. If I had to do it all over again, I would like to come in with an attitude of learning instead of the attitude of getting out in 4 years."

Shannon Campbell

"I will miss athletics the most. Even though I love everything that I did during my four years, I feel athletics has taught me the most. I've met some really dedicated people."

Jennifer Ramirez

"My memories can never be taken away from me. I've grown up so much during the past 4 years. Believe me, they didn't lie when they said it goes by like that. There's no going back."

Leslie Chapman

"Start applying yourself. At times, I felt bogged down with activities such as tennis and Student Council, even though I loved them. Begin now, you'll feel the accomplishment."

Kelleigh Smith

"When I go to college, that will be the end of a lot of relationships. I'm not looking forward to that. There's new people to meet, but they can never replace my high school friends."

Shannon Finke

"Looking back on the four years I attend JHS, I should have placed my studies in a more serious perspective. I'm going to miss cheerleading, football, Mr. Hensley and even Mr. Belew."

Michael Todd

"There is nothing a person can do as long as he puts his heart and energy into it. I will always cherish my friends and I will always remember them. Always look on the bright side."

Adanna Dunson

"There actually is something to be learned in high school if you will just have an open mind and not be critical and whiny. If I could do it all over again, I wouldn't be such a slacker."

Rob Wingenter

"I'll miss the friends I made in high school (some of them anyway). I'll miss the teachers (some of them anyway). Sad thing is, they'll all miss me. Always try to be the best."

THAT'S A WRAP

Can you conceive the idea of giving up weekends, spending week nights in an enclosed space, and relinquishing lunch breaks for a book? If you qualify to the above situations, you've got exactly what it takes to be on the yearbook staff.

When putting an annual together, you have to deal with stress and problems everyday. To give you an idea, try coping with photographers, freshmen, people who don't show up for pictures, writing, and deadlines that creep up on you like The Blob.

We can vividly recall screaming fits due to our little IBM. It's not easy for five editors to all work on just one computer. Deadlines were also a major cause for taking massive doses of stress tablets and Vivarin. Call us kamikazes, but we loved stress and anything associated with it.

We'll never forget Chelsea's pouting fits, Melissa's name calling, Leti always sick, and "Gap" as we affectionately called Mr. Garner. Constant trips to the bathroom to escape any kind of work were always a must. Mr. Garner could really lay over a guilt trip, though, when we wanted to leave early from a work night. ("Please let us go. It's three in the morning and I have a test first period.") Cold green beans, eggnog shakes, grubbing on pizza, cereal out of a cup, and wearing stickers that said "I love stress" were all part of this uncontrolled chaotic organization.

On one particular work night, it was a week before Christmas. While everyone else was enjoying a much needed vacation, we were here at the school as usual sorting through photographs, gossiping, and all that other stuff. It was around twenty degrees outside and we were slowly freezing our noses off. Anyway, it soon occurred to us that this was our last Christmas vacation. All those other years, we just laid around the house doing nothing. But this year, we were actually productive. I guess that was the first time that being a senior really hit us. It was kind of scary. Oh well, it had to happen sooner or later.

Anyway, Daisy always thought she could cut down Mr. G., but in the end, he held the grade book and let everyone know it. However, she did get him good once when she blurted out in class "I know you buy Generic pizzas at HEB!" Since then, Mr. Garner has only bought Red Baron, Blue Bell, and all those other expensive brands. Boy, it's so easy to give somebody a complex.

Yearbook class evolved into something no other class could even match; we became sort of the Breakfast Club. Outside class was another story. We had a symbiotic relationship of sorts. We were all different, but we still worked together to reach our goals. I guess there's some truth to the phrase "It takes all kinds."

Kathy received the coveted "Goon of the Year" award for her hyperventilating spats. To see her disagree was like watching an erupting volcano.

Anyway, to the serious stuff. We Got The Look was printed on a 9x12 format by Newfoto Yearbooks (San Angelo, Texas) on Glossy enamel 80 lb. paper with color senior mugs. Body Copy was 12 point Times Roman and captions were 10 point Times Roman (well, mostly). Headlines were Jefferson Script, Geneva Outline, Korinna Bold, and English Script. 350 bound copies were printed and the yearbook representative was John Overall out of San Marcos. The account executive was Mendi Holt.

I'm sure that a few names will be left out, but you know who you are and you know what you did. Many thanks to (in no specific order): Leti Fernandez, Melissa Garcia, Chelsea Taylor, Angela Mancuso, Mrs. Cowart, Mr. Mac, Mrs. Salazar, Wendy Santana, Roland Salazar, Heather Donovan, Donna Ausbrooks, Rebecca Fernandez, the radio in the dark room, Jennifer and Jessica who Mr. Garner never got straight, Belinda Ramirez, Michael Wade, Shannon Duncan, Tracy Brown, Chris Rodela, and Tania Vincent.

A special thanks goes out to Grady Harrison and Norma Martinez of the Bee Picayune.

Oh yeah . . . last but not least, thanks to uh . . . oh what was his name . . . (just kidding!) Matthew Garner for doing a great job as . . . what did he do? . . . uh . . . oh yeah . . . yearbook advisor.

Left "This is me trying to do my Marilyn Monroe Impersonation. Pretty alluring, huh? Get a load of the red lipstick." — Kathy Hanshaw.

Right "Get a look at those legs. 50 years from now, I'm going to look back at those high school glory days and wonder: 'How did I ever pass Dr. McTee's class'." — Daisy Loya

At many times we thought we would kill each other but in the end, it really was worth all the hard work. We've learned a lot about each other and what our capabilities are. See you at the reunion!

Daisy Loya
